Charles Hilton Architects is seeking 2015 architectural graduates for entry-level positions. Candidates must demonstrate strong creative and technical skills as well as proficiency with AutoCad. Experience with Revit or other BIM software is a plus. Applicants should be team oriented and self-motivated in order to contribute to a productive environment and assume greater responsibilities as the position develops.

Established by Charles F. Hilton, this award-winning firm continues to build on a twenty-five year tradition of fine classical and traditional architectural design. Charles Hilton Architects strives to create thoughtfully-designed buildings of enduring character that can meaningfully improve the daily lives of their inhabitants. The office currently consists of 17 highly dedicated individuals with specialized training ranging from historic preservation to sustainable design to architectural interiors. While the majority of the firm's portfolio consists of beautifully-designed and regionally-sensitive traditional homes in the greater New York Metropolitan Area, its work stretches across the country and includes select civic and commercial projects.

The firm's projects are featured regularly in regional and national publications. Charles Hilton's work has been recognized in numerous design competitions, including the American Institute of Architects' Alice Washburn Award for outstanding traditional design work and the prestigious Palladio Award, garnering 27 awards in the past couple years alone.
